

Not a good idea to allow RF to be put up on powerlines. I've had problems with powerline noise and the power companies didn't really care to fix it until "threatened". Technology is improving every day allowing more and more data to be moved over non radiating means. Allowing this could cause many complaints to elected officials from anyone that uses RF communications.